

"Battle for China":

UNITY IS MAGIC WORD IN BATTLE RAVAGED CHINA

Is Also The Most Elusive In Nationalist China

SEARCH NOT NEW

If Unity Can Be Achieved Tide May Be Changed Against Communists

The magic word in battle-torn China is "unity." It is also the most elusive. In the following article, second of a series of five on the momentous military and political struggle now searing the lives of 450,000,000 Chinese, veteran Foreign Eastern Correspondent Howard Handelman tells of the currents and counter-currents besetting all of China's leaders.

By Howard Handelman (Far Eastern Director, International News Service)

TAIPEH, Formosa, Aug. 9.—(INS)—"Unity is the magic word in Nationalist China—and a long-sought objective.

If unity can be achieved by the Nationalists, they may be able to turn the tide against the advancing Communists.

Lack of unity was the fundamental problem facing Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek when, last month, he resumed leadership of the Nationalist fight against the Communists.

Nor is the search for unity anything new in China. It also was the goal Dr. Sun Yat Sen, founder of the republic, strove for throughout his life. Other Chinese revolutionaries, including the Communists, have been seeking it too for 40 years.

China, with its vast territory; its 450,000,000 to 500,000,000 peoples; its many languages, religions and races—and its traditional provincial hatreds, prejudices and rivalries—never has been a "nation" in the Western sense.

All Chinese read the same language, but around that common written language are scores of spoken dialects completely unintelligible to any but the people of the district in which they prevail.

A Shanghai Chinese, for instance, can no more converse with a Cantonese than a German can talk with an Italian.

Sun Yat-Sen and then Chiang Kai-Shek tried hard to lead a revolution which would convert China

A SUMMARY OF THE NEWS

The Senate passed last night and sent to conference with the House the $5,947,724,000 appropriation bill to finance Marshall Plan allocations, occupation costs of the United States Army and continued assistance to Greece and Turkey for the current fiscal year. Sixty-three Senators, thirty-six Democrats and twenty-seven Republicans, supported the bill; six Republicans and one Democrat opposed it.

A proposal by Senator Vandenberg and other Republicans that the Administration accept an interim program of foreign military aid involving an initial expenditure below that of the requested $1,450,000,000 drew a sharp rejoinder from Secretary of State Acheson, who said there was "no point" in it. Mr. Acheson said this nation's "first line of defense is still in Europe" and the military weakness of Europe should be remedied as quickly as possible.

The Ministerial Committee of the Council of Europe recommended that Greece, Turkey and Iceland be admitted as members of the Council.

The military organization for the defense of the nations allied under the North Atlantic treaty may be formed "within a few months," Gen-

According to the picnic committee, the participants "ate them out of house and home." Something like 80 hams; 3,000 clams and another 3,000 ears of corn, and a ton of other miscellaneous items, including cheese, bologna and barrels and barrels of liquid refreshments were completely disposed of before the final gong sounded the end of the 1949 picnic.

"It was the most successful that we have ever staged," the committee spokesmen said.

Political speeches were barred according to the GOP picnic rules, but no restrictions were placed on the amount of food you wanted to consume.

Congressman Franklin H. Lichtenwalter, of the Bucks-Lehigh district, made the trip from Washington especially to be on hand for the

A new Congressional move to help Nationalist China was begun by two Representatives. A Democrat and a Republican introduced a bill asking that $200,000,000 in military aid be extended to the Nationalists.

The Nationalist Government meanwhile appeared to be preparing to quit its temporary capital at Canton as it speeded evacuation of its personnel and equipment. An evacuation of another sort was taking place in Shanghai, where the Communists were moving hundreds of thousands of Chinese to farms and villages.

SUGGESTS THAT COUNCIL ENACT CURFEW LAW TO PROTECT MORALS OF YOUNG FOLKS WHOSE MORALS ARE BEING DEGRADED

Bristol needs a curfew law. At least that is the opinion of John Racagnio, fifth ward councilman, who, last evening, asked council to give consideration to such a law to protect the youth of Bristol. Support was given to the suggestion by Francis J. Byers, and upon motion of I. J. Hetherington, the matter was referred to police committee and the ordinance committee for consideration.

Councilman Racagnio said that young men in cars having New Jersey licenses stop along the streets here and that young girls are invited into the cars and the conduct is not good for the morals of the youths.

He suggested that the police take action in the matter and keep an eye on this sort of action upon the

YACHTSMAN HERE HAS FUN WITH A PORPOISE

Had Been Much Conjecture Over What Huge Fish Was

BETWEEN 12 AND 15 FT.

Is it a whale? Is it a shark? Is it a porpoise? That is the question which is agitating habitants of the Delaware river in this vicinity.

First it was reported that a whale had come up the Delaware river and was to be found in the channel between Burlington Island and the Burlington mainland. This threw a scare into bathers and boatmen alike.

Then some said that it was a shark. This report sent cold shivers up the spinal columns of river bathers, and many kept out of the river and sought other localities for bathing.

Now it is said that the stranger seen swimming in the Delaware is a porpoise.

Clarence W. Winter, well-known yachtsman, said today that which is attracting so much attention and which has even gotten notoriety in Philadelphia newspapers, is a porpoise.

MODERNIZATION OF SHELTER COMPLETED

Wire-Enclosed, Tree-Shaded Runs Among The SPCA Changes At Lahaska

DETAILED REPORT

LAHASKA, Aug. 9.—The shelter of Bucks County Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, located here, has been modernized. This announcement was made at the meeting of the executive committee Thursday evening.

Among the improvements are new wire-enclosed tree-shaded runs with concrete floors and ramp leading to metal-walled spick and span individual kennels, a spacious exercise corral, and box stall for horses and other livestock given temporary accommodations.

Visitors in search of a healthy lovable pup, full-grown dog, kitten or cat are very likely to find among the shelter's "inmates" exactly the sort of four-footed pal they've set their hearts on. There must be proof, however, of a worthy home and kindly care plus agreement that if, for any reason, "adoption" is regretted, the animal will be returned to the society and not be transferred elsewhere without express permission.

TRAFFIC VIOLATIONS PILE UP FOR ONE MAN

Philadelphian Fined $71.75 Plus Costs For Ignoring Summonses

IS ARRESTED HERE

It cost a Philadelphia man $71.75 in fines for ignoring police orders for traffic violations in Bristol and in lower Bucks County. Added to this were costs of the case.

Joseph J. Gonforone, 2913 Disston street, Philadelphia, was stopped in Bristol by Police Officer John Sackville, on July 19th. On that occasion Gonforone was unable to produce an operator's license, and informed the officer that he had left it at home. He was given 48 hours in which to report at police headquarters here with the license. This he failed to do.

A few days later he was given a "ticket" for a parking violation on Mill street and when he did not report in the given time he was mailed a summons. To this he paid no attention.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

By Walter Kiernan (Distributed by International News Service)

No decision has been reached on selling pieces of the White House... some say it's never been done before although political historians might disagree.

But millions of Americans would pay a dime or a dollar toward the restoration in exchange for a bit of molding, hunk of plaster or other souvenir.

They're going to pay it anyway in taxes, and think of the cheer a souvenir of the White House would bring into the drab life of a Republican family!

Just to be able to point to a framed bit of velvet over the fireplace and say "Coolidge looked out from behind that drape."

Mr. Hoover is one of the few living Americans who can remember that there ever was a Republican President.

And Democrats have been saying such nice things about him in advance of his birthday that they must have forgotten he was.

RED DRIVE FOR JAPAN

Communists have succeeded in garnering only an insignificant vote in Japan, but they are readying their well known technique to tie that country into knots. They have the aid now of returned war prisoners from Russia who were thoroughly impregnated with communism.

As the world learned during the war, the Japanese are capable of pushing warfare with fanatical cruelty. And if the communists ever get the upper hand, the populace will fall into line like sheep. In this situation General MacArthur stands as the dominant figure. He has already spoken more strongly against Russia than any other world figure, and if the bumbling bureaucrats in Washington do not countermand him, he'll hold a tight rein.

Asia is crumbling before a red drive and America must hold Japan, Okinawa, the Philippines, and protect Australia, which can expect little if any aid from the decrepit socialist government in London. The alternative is that Russia will cut across this country's lifelines in the Pacific.

Russia is plugging for a four-power conference to make peace with Japan. The four powers would be America, Russia, Red China and Britain. With that lineup, the Russians might easily win a foothold in Japan. But Washington has not been caught napping in this instance. It continues to contend all nations engaged in the war against the axis should make the peace, an aggregation in which the West has a majority.

It has already been demonstrated that Russia respects a firm position. MacArthur is the man who can present it to them. If Washington backs him up, he'll tell the Moscow gang in language that is effective if not diplomatic.

MEXICAN CANAL

Mexico has a scheme to dig a sea level canal across the narrow part of that country, a distance of 140 miles. The stream bed of the Coatzacoalcas River could be used for 90 miles. There would be no locks.

Bombing damage in war could be repaired in a few days, whereas bombs could knock out the Panama Canal for months. It would save 2,000 miles of sailing between New York and West Coast ports. Construction cost is estimated at $3,500,000,000.

It might be concluded that if such a canal is dug, the United States will be sitting on a nearly worthless investment in Panama. That isn't the case, however. This country is expected to put up the money and provide the engineers for the job.

Senator Dennis Chavez of New Mexico long has been an advocate of the Mexican Canal and has a bill pending in Congress to construct it as a defense measure.

If the United States provides the money and personnel for a canal through Mexico, presumably it would have a first mortgage on the property and have full rights along with Mexico. But this might turn out to be wishful thinking.

LIFE GOES INTO HIGH GEAR FOR ONE OF 70

Actress of Some 70 Summers "Steals" Show From Stars

PLAYS ROLE TO HILT

By Inez Robb
(Distributed by INS)

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—(INS)—Life may begin at forty but it really starts rolling in high gear at around three score and ten.

The most fragrant bit of larceny on Broadway is committed eight times weekly by a woman of some seventy summers.

The larcenous lady is Miss Ethel Griffies, who will probably never see seventy again and who made her first stage appearance when she was two and a half. She not only swipes the new musical comedy "Miss Liberty" right out from under its youthful feminine stars, Mary McCarty and Allyn McLerie, but she has compounded the felony by becoming the current toast of Broadway.

Just exactly how old is Miss Griffies, who sings and capers through "Miss Liberty," nobody knows—and the lady herself ain't talkin'. It's not my vanity, my dear, it's just that my age is my own business," Miss Griffies said with a sly smile as we sat in the drawing room of the mid-town hotel apartment where she makes her home with her actor husband, Edward Cooper.

In "Miss Liberty," this English-born actress plays the most raffish, thoroughly disreputable old harri-dan that Broadway has seen in years. And plays it to the hilt.

No matter how dubious the critics may have been about other facets of the Robert Sherwood-Irving Berlin-Moss Hart musical, they agreed as one that she stole the show and is slightly wonderful.

How does it feel, I asked her, to be the Belle of Broadway at—well—at three score and ten.

"It's very nice," she said placidly. "But at my age, there's no future in it."

Then she laughed the deep, rowdy laugh with which she fills the theatre nightly and added:

"At my age, you don't have much future left."

Before I went to call on Miss Griffies, I had never seen her except on the stage. I had no idea what she would be like, but I rather feared a bottle blonde, with a half-nelson on perennial youth and bleached curls. I couldn't have been wronger, the shameless scene stealer of "Miss Liberty" has gray—almost white—hair, cut rather short and innocent of beauty-parlor kinks. The fact is Miss Griffies looks her age, whatever that is. And is quite content to be it.

She was dressed in dowager black, in a cut that would have done credit to Queen Mary, her slim feet elegantly encased in black suede pumps with handsome cut steel buckles.

The only links between Miss Griffies and the old harri-dan she plays so triumphantly are a salty sense of humor, an endless vigor and the deep, unexpected diaphragm (belly to you) laugh that wells from both. "Miss Liberty" is the first musical she has adorned in 42 years in that interim, she has been a featured player on Anglo-American stages and in 190 Hollywood movies.

After seventeen years and 100 movies in Hollywood, Miss Griffies announced her retirement two years ago and resolutely shipped all the Griffies-Cooper goods and gear back to Liverpool.

Fortunately for Broadway, she and Mr. Cooper stopped in New York for a final look and she was immediately offered a role in John Van Druten's "The Druid Circle." Since then, offers have showered down on her; and retirement grows dimmer and dimmer.

"If 'Miss Liberty' has a good run—say two years—I might retire then," she said. "But if it just runs a season, I think I'd like to do one more play."

The stage-door-Johnny of her youth, "A man-about-town who had both money and leisure," has disappeared, Miss Griffies added.

"There is neither money nor leisure any more," she continued, "and the stage-door-Johnny has been replaced by strange young persons who want my autograph, on untidy slips of paper, for no known reason."

I asked Mr. Cooper if his wife was really as modest as she seemed about her stunning success.

"Don't let her kid you," he advised inelegantly in the most elegant English accent.

Don't Talk of Others Near Child

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

WE have warned against our talking with other adults about the child, especially the young child, in his presence, as if he were a pet or toy. We also considered how we can harm him by bragging to our adult friends about his virtues and exploits or by complaining to them about his faults, while he is listening to us.

Today we shall consider the moral harm to him from hearing us talk of the faults of other folks. In our conversation with guests it is easy for us to drift into the habit of saying things about other persons known by us and by the guests, even to repeat unkind things we have heard about these other persons. Usually our guests are as ready to engage in such talk—to gossip—as we are and they and we egg each other along.

There's just something mean enough in all of us to say unkind things at times of other persons behind their backs. We don't do so on purpose to harm them. We just do it for about the same reason that a dog wags its tail. When we talk as we feel without keeping in mind the possible effect our talk may have on us, the absent person talked about and our listening children, we don't guard our thoughts and speech any more than the cows grazing in the meadow guard their steps. Now the cows are brutes. How much higher are we than the brutes when we gossip?

What makes us talk to gossip? Human Nature. In the first place it takes less of our intelligence to see faults of others than to see their virtues, and we all are pretty lazy. It makes us feel pretty important ourselves to dwell on others' ills and shortcomings. The implication is, "Now look at me." Speaking ill of others in secret adds some lure since we feel it's a bit naughty.

United Nations General Assembly, said the last year had seen a lessening of war fears and progress "towards a more peaceful world."

In Central Ecuador's earthquake-devastated area 100,000 persons were homeless, but the estimate of

Our adult listeners egg us on for like reasons. And our children sensing it something of a secret listen eagerly. All human beings, when they act without self-guidance and self-criticism have itching ears for gossip and tingling tongues for passing it along. Then why should we not expect our children hearing us gossip pass along our remarks and also practice at gossip gathered and disseminated from other sources?

You and I should also realize that it does something to us inside when we say unkind things of other persons behind their backs. It sometimes makes us feel we have been mean and sneaking and the more so when we realize we have made our listening children partners in our meanness. It causes our listening children to suppose we gain satisfactions over others' faults and failures, get pleasures from their pains.

A good rule for us parents is to say nothing in our children's presence (or absence) about other (absent) persons which we would not say in the presence of these persons. Since there are so many grand people in the world, why should we not talk of the good traits and doings of them? Why should we not practice at speaking well (honestly) of other persons behind their backs, hoping that our children might do likewise?

We could be a lot happier then, we could win and keep more friends and be more useful in the world. So could our children. If enough of us could work in this direction this world would become a lovelier place in which to live. It might be the real beginning of universal peace.

But such achievement won't be easy. It will cost us constant upward striving. (A copy of a prayer I wrote for us parents may be had in a stamped envelope sent me in care of this paper.)

the death toll was reduced to between 2,000 and 4,000.

More Eyebrows Now the Style

Courtesy 20th Century Fox

Pretty eyebrows are a valuable beauty asset and should be treated as such, says Movie Star Jean Peters. Pluck them, but not too much, she adds.

By HELEN FOLLETT

NO beauty frenzy has done so much to change the expression of the feminine map as the attenuated eyebrow. What you do to these little forehead semicircles has much to do with the way you look, charming or otherwise.

A change has come, a sort of swing back, as happens to all pulchritude whimsies. Eyebrows have been long and narrow. They are still long—sometimes extended by means of the crayon—but they are definitely more robust, more like the natural design. It won't do to tweeze them to a definitely straight line, a practice of some of our amateur eyebrow weedeers. They should have a graceful curve because the lines of the face are curved—the lips, the wings of the nose, the eyes and the chin.

Along Border Line
It became pretty much of a custom to tweeze along the under border line, upping the position of the eyebrow. All right if it suits

facial proportions and features, but not good when the forehead is low. The inner end of the eyebrow should extend slightly beyond the inner termination of the eyelashes. Arching must conform to the shape of the eye. If the eyes are long and narrow, the far end of the eyebrow should droop gracefully to a fine point.

It is interesting to know that long ago, time when your great-grandmother was young, skippy eyebrows were considered a good-looks liability. It seems that the ladies of that period applied hair tonic to theirs so they would be lustrous.

So, one wonders, what is beauty, anyhow? Ideals change with the times. Mr. Webster defines beauty as "that quality or combination of qualities which gratifies the eye or the ear, or which delights the intellectual or moral sense by its grace or fitness to the end in view." Present fashions always seem to delight the eye of woman. And that's just dandy.

QUALITY AT MODERATE COST

its outside appearance is the picture window in the living room at right, and the built-in flower box under the front bedroom window, at left.

THE HOUSE CAN BE BUILT either with or without a basement. When designed with basement, as above, a breezeway connects house and garage.

IF THE BASEMENT IS OMITTED, the space between the kitchen and the garage is devoted to a utility room where the heater and the tubs are located.

By MARION CLYDE MCCARROLL

A VAST amount of interest has grown up today around the so-called modern ranch house.

The trim smartness of the appearance of this type of home, and the very efficient interior plan that is characteristic of it, have combined to win it a wide degree of popular approval.

The two attractive houses pictured here, both coming under the ranch house designation, attractively combine quality construction with moderate cost. Both dwellings are shown with two plans, one with, the other without a basement. Each has an attached garage.

The one at the top of the page has a good-sized living room with fireplace and picture window, two bedrooms and bath, kitchen with dining space, and ample closet room.

The house at the right, slightly smaller than the first, is also a two bedroom home, with living room and kitchen with dining area. Corner windows in living room—which also has an attractive fireplace—provide a luxurious amount of light and air.

In each case, where the house is built without the basement, a utility room is located between the house itself and the garage.

Blueprints for constructing either of these houses, whether with or without the basement, can be obtained at reasonable cost through your local lumber dealer, who can order them for you from National Plan Service, Inc., 1315 W. Congress Street, Chicago 7, Ill. Identify by name or number as shown in corner of picture.

Available also, and without charge, are separate booklets picturing these two houses with their floor plans, and also containing pertinent building information. The booklets can be had by writing to the West Coast Lumbermen's Association, 1410 S. W. Morrison Street, Portland 5, Oregon.

ALTERNATE PLANS are available for this house also, depending upon whether or not a basement is desired. Note the basement stairs here.

AND HERE A UTILITY ROOM occupies the space used in the other plan for the basement stairs, and a place for a heater is found in the kitchen.

Winter says that the porpoise measures "between 12 and 15 feet." "I have seen him and played with him. Last Friday I played with him for more than an hour and followed him from Pennsbury to Fieldsboro and then again in the area of Bordentown.

"I followed him up the river in the center of the channel. He is not afraid of my boat and I would run alongside of him and he would bob up and down and in and out of the water. He would come up about every minute or every minute and a half. If I went close to him he disappeared beneath the water and stayed there."

Winter saw the porpoise again last night in the river off the Kaiser-Fleetwings plant here, and had a lot of fun with him.

Friday night, when Winter first saw him, the Bristol yachtsman went to Bordentown and told some of the members of the yacht club there, and they scoffed at the idea. "All right, come with me," was the invitation extended, and when shown they believed.

It is the opinion of John L. Kilcoyne, Esq., that the porpoise has followed some school of fish up the river recently and is staying here.

ANOTHER HOUSE OF THE RANCH TYPE is this compact little hip-roofed dwelling. Exterior construction is also of siding. Note pleasant corner windows, one of them in the living room, right, the other in dining area.

picnic. Speaking over the "microphone," at the request of State Senator Edward B. Watson, Congressman Lichtenwalter assured his many friends that he was "practicing up" for that solo he is scheduled to sing at the October 10th meeting of the Loyal Republican Club of Bucks County, when "Lichtenwalter and Candidates' Night" will be celebrated.

All the county candidates were on hand for the picnic, including Willard S. Curtin, Morrisville, for District Attorney; Harry R. Ross, Churchville, for Sheriff; Joseph A. Keating, Penndel, for Prothonotary; County Controller Howard G. Krupp, Chalfont, seeking another term; J. Hart Jamison, Ivyland, for Recorder of Deeds; J. Robert Hendricks, of Bristol, for Jury Commissioner.

President Judge Hiram H. Keller, candidate for another term; and District Attorney Edward G. Bleser, who has been unanimously endorsed by the Bar Association and by the executive committee of the Republican County Committee for the appointment to the office of additional law judge, were also among the picnickers.

Many new members were signed up during the picnic to increase the rapidly-growing membership of the club, that is now probably the most active of its kind in the entire State.

Put Stunt, Sport Type Control Models in Air

Hundreds of interested spectators were attracted to the model air show held by the Aeromodelers Sunday afternoon at Wilson Field. Dozens of stunt and sport type control line models were in the air all afternoon. Model "dog fights" were staged by visiting members of the Glenside Air Scouts.

Late in the afternoon a thrilling team race was held. Ralph Biddle, a member of the Doylestown Model Club, won this event with an average speed for the five mile race of 58 miles per hour. This included stops for refueling and repairs.

No contest speed or stunt models were flown because members of the club are saving them for the Lancaster model meet next Sunday. This is expected to be the last Sunday model air show or flying session until winter because the Sunday contest schedule is booked solid until November 1st.

"Movies" of some 1949 air races will be shown to Aeromodelers at the meeting on Wednesday evening. A business meeting will be held at several items of importance need to be voted upon.

Pneumatic Hammer Hits Worker, Causes Blast

BUCKINGHAM, Aug. 9.—Struck by a pneumatic hammer he was using which detonated a stick of dynamite, John Molis, 33, of Rushland, was injured. The quarry is operated by the Bituminous Service Co., of Chester.

The blast threw Molis into a pile of crushed stone, bits of which became embedded in the upper part of his body. A fellow-worker, Joseph Solana, 26, of Warrington, Molis' brother-in-law, was nearby. He suffered minor head cuts from flying stones. Ignoring his injuries, Solana put Molis in his automobile and drove him to Doylestown Emergency Hospital. After treatment, Molis was transferred to Abington Memorial Hospital, where doctors said his condition was good.

RED DRIVE FOR JAPAN

Communists have succeeded in garnering only an insignificant vote in Japan, but they are readying their well known technique to tie that country into knots. They have the aid now of returned war prisoners from Russia who were thoroughly impregnated with communism.

As the world learned during the war, the Japanese are capable of pushing warfare with fanatical cruelty. And if the communists ever get the upper hand, the populace will fall into line like sheep. In this situation General MacArthur stands as the dominant figure. He has already spoken more strongly against Russia than any other world figure, and if the bumbling bureaucrats in Washington do not command him, he'll hold a tight rein.

Asia is crumbling before a red drive and America must hold Japan, Okinawa, the Philippines and protect Australia, which can expect little if any aid from the decrepit socialist government in London. The alternative is that Russia will cut across this country's lifelines in the Pacific.

Russia is plugging for a four-power conference to make peace with Japan. The four powers would be America, Russia, Red China and Britain. With that lineup, the Russians might easily win a foothold in Japan. But Washington has not been caught napping in this instance. It continues to contend all nations engaged in the war against the axis should make the peace, an aggregation in which the West has a majority.

It has already been demonstrated that Russia respects a firm position. MacArthur is the man who can present it to them. If Washington backs him up, he'll tell the Moscow gang in language that is effective if not diplomatic.

MEXICAN CANAL

Mexico has a scheme to dig a sea level canal across the narrow part of that country, a distance of 140 miles. The stream bed of the Coatzacoalcas River could be used for 90 miles. There would be no locks.

Bombing damage in war could be repaired in a few days, whereas bombs could knock out the Panama Canal for months. It would save 2,000 miles of sailing between New York and West Coast ports. Construction cost is estimated at $3,500,000,000.

It might be concluded that if such a canal is dug, the United States will be sitting on a nearly worthless investment in Panama. That isn't the case, however. This country is expected to put up the money and provide the engineers for the job.

Senator Dennis Chavez of New Mexico long has been an advocate of the Mexican Canal and has a bill pending in Congress to construct it as a defense measure.

If the United States provides the money and personnel for a canal through Mexico, presumably it would have a first mortgage on the property and have full rights along with Mexico. But this might turn out to be wishful thinking.

LIFE GOES INTO HIGH GEAR FOR ONE OF 70

Actress of Some 70 Summers "Steals" Show From Stars

PLAYS ROLE TO HILT

By Inez Robb
(Distributed by INS)
NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—(INS)—Life may begin at forty but it really starts rolling in high gear at around three score and ten.

The most flagrant bit of larceny on Broadway is committed eight times weekly by a woman of some seventy summers.

The larcenous lady is Miss Ethel Griffies, who will probably never see seventy again and who made her first stage appearance when she was two and a half. She not only swipes the new musical comedy "Miss Liberty" right out from under its youthful feminine stars, Mary McCarty and Allyn McLerie, but she has compounded the felony by becoming the current toast of Broadway.

Just exactly how old is Miss Griffies, who sings and capers through "Miss Liberty," nobody knows—and the lady herself ain't talkin'. It's not my vanity, my dear, it's just that my age is my own business," Miss Griffies said with a sly smile as we sat in the drawing room of the mid-town hotel apartment where she makes her home with her actor husband, Edward Cooper.

In "Miss Liberty," this English-born actress plays the most raffish, thoroughly disreputable old harridan that Broadway has seen in years. And plays it to the hilt.

No matter how dubious the critics may have been about other facets of the Robert Sherwood-Irving Berlin-Moss Hart musical, they agreed as one that she stole the show and is slightly wonderful.

How does it feel, I asked her, to be the Belle of Broadway at—well—at three score and ten.

"It's very nice," she said placidly. "But at my age, there's no future in it."

Then she laughed the deep, rowdy laugh with which she fills the theatre nightly and added: "At my age, you don't have much future left."

Before I went to call on Miss Griffies, I had never seen her except on the stage. I had no idea what she would be like, but I rather feared a bottle blonde, with a half-nelson on perennial youth and bleached curls. I couldn't have been wronger, the shameless scene stealer of "Miss Liberty" has gray—almost white—hair, cut rather short and innocent of beauty-parlor kinks. The fact is, Miss Griffies looks her age, whatever that is. And is quite content to be it.

She was dressed in dowager black, in a cut that would have done credit to Queen Mary, her slim feet elegantly encased in black suede pumps with handsome cut steel buckles.

The only links between Miss Griffies and the old harridan she plays so triumphantly are a salty sense of humor, an ageless vigor and the deep, unexpected diaphragm (belly to you) laugh that wells from both. "Miss Liberty" is the first musical she has adorned in 42 years in that interim, she has been a featured player on Anglo-American stages and in 100 Hollywood movies.

After seventeen years and 100 movies in Hollywood, Miss Griffies announced her retirement two years ago and resolutely shipped all the Griffies-Cooper goods and gear back to Liverpool.

Fortunately for Broadway, she and Mr. Cooper stopped in New York for a final look and she was immediately offered a role in John Van Druten's "The Druid Circle." Since then, offers have showered down on her; and retirement grows dimmer and dimmer.

"If 'Miss Liberty' has a good run—say two years—I might retire then," she said. "But if it just runs a season, I think I'd like to do one more play."

The stage-door-Johnny of her youth, "A man-about-town who had both money and leisure," has disappeared, Miss Griffies added.

"There is neither money nor leisure any more," she continued, "and the stage-door-Johnny has been replaced by strange young persons who want my autograph, on untidy slips of paper, for no known reason."

I asked Mr. Cooper if his wife was really as modest as she seemed about her stunning success.

"Don't let her kid you," he advised inelegantly in the most elegant English accent.

WINGLESS CHICKS

NEW YORK.—(INS)—Three dozen wingless chicken eggs for hatching purposes have been flown by breeder Peter Bauman of Des Moines to England. The shipment, via British Overseas Airways, went to Harper Adams Agricultural College, Newport, Shropshire.

Don't Talk of Others Near Child

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

WE have warned against our talking with other adults about the child, especially the young child, in his presence, as if he were a pet or toy. We also considered how we can harm him by bragging to our adult friends about his virtues and exploits or by complaining to them about his faults, while he is listening to us.

Today we shall consider the moral harm to him from hearing us talk of the faults of other folks. In our conversation with guests it is easy for us to drift into the habit of saying things about other persons known by us and by the guests, even to repeat unkind things we have heard about these other persons. Usually our guests are as ready to engage in such talk—to gossip—as we are and they and we egg each other along.

There's just something mean enough in all of us to say unkind things at times of other persons behind their backs. We don't do so on purpose to harm them. We just do it for about the same reason that a dog wags its tail. When we talk as we feel without keeping in mind the possible effect our talk may have on us, the absent person talked about and our listening children, we don't guard our thoughts and speech any more than the cows grazing in the meadow guard their steps. Now the cows are brutes. How much higher are we than the brutes when we gossip?

What makes us want to gossip? Human Nature. In the first place it takes less of our intelligence to see faults of others than to see their virtues, and we all are pretty lazy. It makes us feel pretty important ourselves to dwell on others' ills and shortcomings. The implication is, "Now look at me." Speaking ill of others in secret adds some lure since we feel it's a bit naughty.

Our adult listeners egg us on for like reasons. And our children sensing it something of a secret listen eagerly. All human beings, when they act without self-guidance and self-criticism have itching ears for gossip and tingling tongues for passing it along. Then why should we not expect our children hearing us gossip pass along our remarks and also practice at gossip gathered and disseminated from other sources?

You and I should also realize that it does something to us inside when we say unkind things of other persons behind their backs. It sometimes makes us feel we have been mean and sneaking and the more so when we realize we have made our listening children partners in our meanness. It causes our listening children to suppose we gain satisfactions over others' faults and failures, get pleasures from their pains.

A good rule for us parents is to say nothing in our children's presence (or absence) about other (absent) persons which we would not say in the presence of these persons. Since there are so many grand people in the world, why should we not talk of the good traits and doings of them? Why should we not practice at speaking well (honestly) of other persons behind their backs, hoping that our children might do likewise?

We could be a lot happier then, we could win and keep more friends and be more useful in the world. So could our children. If enough of us could work in this direction this world would become a lovelier place in which to live. It might be the real beginning of universal peace.

But such achievement won't be easy. It will cost us constant upward striving. (A copy of a prayer I wrote for us parents may be had in a stamped envelope sent me in care of this paper.)

More Eyebrows Now the Style

Pretty eyebrows are a valuable beauty asset and should be treated as such, says Movie Star Jean Peters. Pluck them, but not too much, she adds.

By HELEN FOLLETT

NO beauty frenzy has done so much to change the expression of the feminine map as the attenuated eyebrow. What you do to these little forehead semicircles has much to do with the way you look, charming or otherwise.

A change has come, a sort of swing back, as happens to all pulchritude whimsies. Eyebrows have been long and narrow. They are still long—sometimes extended by means of the crayon—but they are definitely more robust, more like the natural design. It won't do to tweeze them to a definitely straight line, a practice of some of our amateur eyebrow weederers. They should have a graceful curve because the lines of the face are curved—the lips, the wings of the nose, the eyes and the chin.

Along Border Line

It became pretty much of a custom to tweeze along the under border line, upping the position of the eyebrow. All right if it suits

facial proportions and features, but not good when the forehead is low. The inner end of the eyebrow should extend slightly beyond the inner termination of the eyelashes. Arching must conform to the shape of the eye. If the eyes are long and narrow, the far end of the eyebrow should droop gracefully to a fine point.

It is interesting to know that long ago, time when your great-grandmother was young, skimp eyebrows were considered a good-looking liability. It seems that the ladies of that period applied hair tonic to theirs so they would be lustrous.

So, one wonders, what is beauty, anyhow? Ideals change with the times. Mr. Webster defines beauty as "that quality or combination of qualities which gratifies the eye or the ear, or which delights the intellectual or moral sense by its grace or fitness to the end in view." Present fashions always seem to delight the eye of woman. And that's just dandy.

SERVING FAMILY, COMMUNITY, NATION...

Did you ever stop to think that we live, we learn, we travel — all through the pages of the newspaper we read! How much broader is the scope of our lives, because we can read about the wide world in news-print. How much more we know about people and politics; child care and cooking; health and happiness — because our newspaper covers everything! Its editorial columns better our way of life, too, by championing the democratic way when vital issues face us as a family — as a community — as a nation! And praised be its advertising columns for simultaneously serving our needs and our budgets! All in all there is no truer "public servant" than your newspaper and ours!

In sports, in news, in features, in church news, school news, the recording of social activities, in news of local, county and state governmental policies and activities . . . the Courier broadens the scope of our daily horizon. You'll find complete coverage in the Courier's news columns daily.

QUALITY AT MODERATE COST

THE HOUSE CAN BE BUILT either with or without a basement. When designed with basement, as above, a breezeway connects house and garage.

IF THE BASEMENT IS OMITTED, the space between the kitchen and the garage is devoted to a utility room where the heater and the tubs are located.

By MARION CLYDE McCARROLL

A VAST amount of interest has grown up today around the so-called modern ranch house.

The trim smartness of the appearance of this type of home, and the very efficient interior plan that is characteristic of it, have combined to win it a wide degree of popular approval.

The two attractive houses pictured here, both coming under the ranch house designation, attractively combine quality construction with moderate cost. Both dwellings are shown with two plans, one with, the other without a basement. Each has an attached garage.

window, two bedrooms and bath, kitchen with dining space, and ample closet room. Exterior construction is an interesting combination of horizontal and vertical siding, with brick used for the built-in flower box under the front bedroom window at the left and, of course, for the chimney.

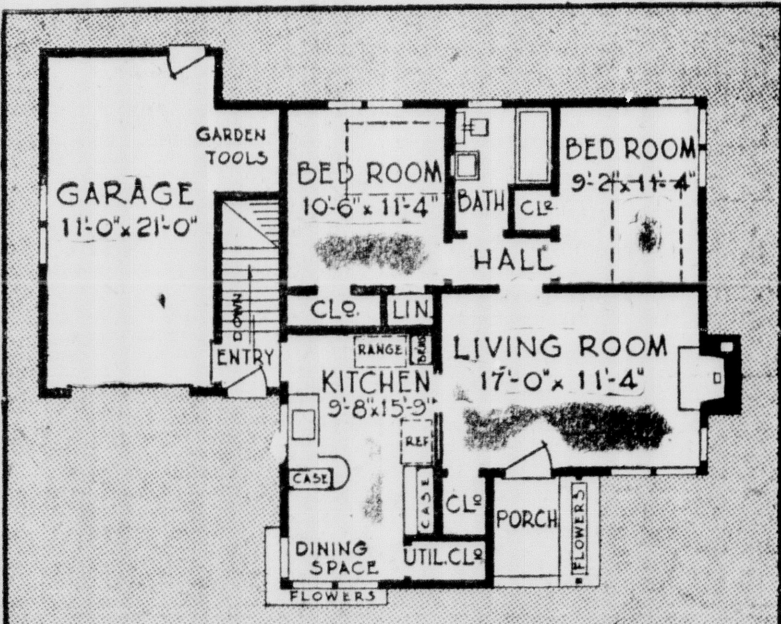

The house at the right, slightly smaller than the first, is also a two bedroom home, with living room and kitchen with dining area. Corner windows in living room—which also has an attractive fireplace—one bedroom and the dining space, provides a luxurious amount of light and air.

In each case, where the house is built without the basement, a utility room is located between the house itself and the garage.

Blueprints for constructing either of these houses, whether with or without the basement, can be obtained at reasonable cost through your local lumber dealer, who can order them for you from National Plan Service, Inc., 1315 W. Congress Street, Chicago 7, Ill. Identify by name or number as shown in corner of picture.

Available also, and without charge, are separate booklets picturing these two houses with their floor plans, and also containing pertinent building information. The booklets can be had by writing to the West Coast Lumbermen's Association, 1410 S.W. Morrison Street, Portland 5, Oregon.

ALTERNATE PLANS are available for this house also, depending upon whether or not a basement is desired. Note the basement stairs here.

AND HERE A UTILITY ROOM occupies the space used in the other plan for the basement stairs, and a place for a heater is found in the kitchen.

CATS LOSE OUT

SAN DIEGO, Cal.—(INS)—Fourteen cats lost a $2,000 bequest provided in the will of the late William Rushon Bowker. A court ruled it was doubtful if the cats currently at the Bowker home were the same ones owned by Bowker when he was alive.

Modernization of Shelter Completed

backer Davis, for the period of June 1st to July 31st indicated that the society is competently discharging its functions in behalf of animals throughout the county.

Scores of complaints involving cruelty were promptly investigated and effectively dealt with. Live-stock and poultry sales were regularly inspected with resulting correction of improper handling and overcrowding. A sharp watch was kept for unnecessary suffering of animals during transportation, particular emphasis was given to curbing hit-run motorists failing to stop and render assistance after injuring dogs, cats and other animals.

During the two months covered by the field secretary's report the society's ambulance service made collections of dogs and cats reaching a total of 1143. Fifty-three dogs and 7 cats were placed in homes. Six burials were made in the shelter's pet cemetery.

Arrest, prosecution and conviction of two violators of sections of the penal code protecting animals against cruelty were also reported. One of the offenders a hit-run driver, who failed to stop after fatally injuring a dog. The other the owner of a dog which had been permitted to suffer prolonged torture from a collar so tightly strapped that it had become partially imbedded in maggot-infested and putrescent sores. Examination after the hopelessly suffering animal had been mercifully destroyed further disclosed a rubber band encircling neck and throat which had penetrated almost to the windpipe.

It was reported that surveys being made throughout the county indicate widespread and growing approval of the society's prompt, impartial and efficient methods of dealing with animal abuses, and an increasing desire on the part of humanitarians to further the society's efforts.

Plans were discussed by the executive committee for securing a long needed representative whose time could be devoted solely to investigational work and contacts with the public now necessarily curtailed because of limited field personnel.

Guzmich acted as secretary. Others in attendance were J. E. Barlow, R. L. Frick, C. W. Sonder, William F. Taylor, Mervin C. West, Theodore H. Graft, Joseph B. Lee, B. K. Overbeck, Sr., Robert Meyers. 4 Scouts were advanced to first class, 11 to second class and 31 merit badges were approved. Certificates for badges were awarded at the Council fire on Saturday evening.

Clarence Mumbauer conducted the safety demonstration on Tuesday evening. 56 Rotarians representing five clubs of Bucks County from Bristol, Morrisville, Quakertown, Doylestown and Washington Crossing held an inter-county meeting at Camp on Wednesday night. After dinner in the dining hall, the clubs were entertained with a water carnival by the campers. The morning chapel service was in charge of Rev. M. M. Hostetter and the afternoon vesper service was in charge of Francis P. Kemmerer, president of the Council.

The last week of camp opened on Sunday with 93 campers in attendance. Camp Ockanickon will close its most successful year in its history with appropriate ceremony Sunday at 1:00 p. m.

Winter says that the porpoise measures "between 12 and 15 feet." "I have seen him and played with him. Last Friday I played with him for more than an hour and followed him from Pennsbury to Fieldsboro and then again in the area of Bordentown.

"I followed him up the river in the center of the channel. He is not afraid of my boat and I would run alongside of him and he would bob up and down and in and out of the water. He would come up about every minute or every minute and a half. If I went close to him he disappeared beneath the water and stayed there."

Winter saw the porpoise again last night in the river off the Kaiser-Fleeting plant here, and had a lot of fun with him.

Friday night, when Winter first saw him, the Bristol yachtsman went to Bordentown and told some of the members of the yacht club there, and they scoffed at the idea. "All right, come with me," was the invitation extended, and when shown they believed.

It is the opinion of John L. Kilcoyne, Esq., that the porpoise has followed some school of fish up the river recently and is staying here.

ANOTHER HOUSE OF THE RANCH TYPE is this compact little hip-roofed dwelling. Exterior construction is also of siding. Note pleasant corner windows, one of them in the living room, right, the other in dining area.

picnic. Speaking over the "mike" briefly, at the request of State Senator Edward B. Watson, Congressman Lichtenwalter assured his many friends that he was "practicing up" for that solo he is scheduled to sing at the October 10th meeting of the Loyal Republican Club of Bucks County, when "Lichtenwalter and Candidates' Night" will be celebrated.

All the county candidates were on hand for the picnic, including Willard S. Curtin, Morrisville, for District Attorney; Harry R. Ross, Churchville, for Sheriff; Joseph A. Keating, Pennell, for Prothonotary; County Controller Howard G. Krupp, Chalfont, seeking another term; J. Hart Jamison, Ivyland, for Recorder of Deeds; J. Robert Hendricks, of Bristol, for Jury Commissioner.

President Judge Hiram H. Keller, candidate for another term; and District Attorney Edward G. Bleser, who has been unanimously endorsed by the Bar Association and by the executive committee of the Republican County Committee for the appointment to the office of additional law judge, were also among the picnickers.

Many new members were signed up during the picnic to increase the rapidly-growing membership of the club, that is now probably the most active of its kind in the entire State.

Put Stunt, Sport Type Control Models in Air

Hundreds of interested spectators were attracted to the model air show held by the Aeromodelers Sunday afternoon at Wilson Field. Dozens of stunt and sport type control line models were in the air all afternoon. Model "dog fights" were staged by visiting members of the Glenside Air Scouts.

Late in the afternoon a thrilling team race was held. Ralph Biddle, a member of the Doylestown Model Club, won this event with an average speed for the five mile race of 58 miles per hour. This included stops for refueling and repairs.

No contest speed or stunt models were flown because members of the club are saving them for the Lancaster model meet next Sunday. This is expected to be the last Sunday model air show or flying session until winter because the Sunday contest schedule is booked solid until November 1st.

"Movies" of some 1949 air races will be shown to Aeromodelers at the meeting on Wednesday evening. A business meeting will be held at several items of importance need to be voted upon.

Pneumatic Hammer Hits Worker, Causes Blast

BUCKINGHAM, Aug. 9.—Struck by a pneumatic hammer he was using which detonated a stick of dynamite, John Molis, 33, of Rushland, was injured. The quarry is operated by the Bituminous Service Co., of Chester.

The blast threw Molis into a pile of crushed stone, bits of which became embedded in the upper part of his body. A fellow-worker, Joseph Solana, 26, of Warrington, Molis' brother-in-law, was nearby. He suffered minor head cuts from flying stones. Ignoring his injuries, Solana put Molis in his automobile and drove him to Doylestown Emergency Hospital. After treatment, Molis was transferred to Abington Memorial Hospital, where doctors said his condition was good.

Hear our prayers, O Lord, and consider our desires. Give unto us true humility, a meek and quiet spirit, a loving, friendly, holy and useful manner of life; bearing the burdens of our neighbors, denying ourselves, and studying to benefit others and to please Thee in all things. Grant us to be faithful in performing promises, loving to our relatives, careful of our charges; to be gentle and easy to be entreated, slow to anger, and readily prepared for every good work; through Christ our Lord. JEFFERIES HITS TWO HOME RUNS AND FIREMEN WIN

Earl Jefferies hit two home runs last evening on Memorial Park field as Fire Company No. 1 beat the Fleetwing Estates team, 11-5. By virtue of its win, the firemen maintained its chances of getting into the playoffs of the Bristol Suburban Softball League.

Jefferies first circuit clout came in the third inning with Allen Hibbs and Alex Dixon on base. The second four-base play came in the fifth frame with Dixon again on base. The firemen's centerfield also had a single to his credit to give him a perfect evening with the stick.

"Eddie" Kornichuck was the winning hurler and with the lead built by his mates early in the game had things his own way. He blanked the Estates' team for the first five stanzas. He was nipped for a run in the sixth and fourth in the seventh. Kornichuck gave up four passes in these two innings.

Tony Zanni was the losing moundsman. He pitched until Jefferies got his first homer. Then "Mike" Graver took up the pitching burden and he finished, allowing four runs and five hits.

Of the five Estates' hits, two went to Frankie Balazs and another pair to Chambers.

Fire Company No. 1, is two games behind the fifth place Fifth Ward team.

ATHLETICS TO HOLD BASEBALL SCHOOL HERE FOR 3 DAYS

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9—Arthur H. Ehlers, director of the Philadelphia Athletics' farm system, announced today that the A's will conduct the famous Connie Mack baseball school in Bristol.

Ehlers said the school will appear on Bristol's Sullivan's Field on August 22-23-24 with the hopes of finding real baseball talent while providing instructions in the fundamentals of the national pastime. Ehlers said that the school will be under the supervision of scouts Ira Thomas, Jack Coombs and Charley Gault.

The baseball sessions are being brought to Bristol through the efforts of William H. Elmer, of 592 Swain street.

In operation since 1942, the Thomas-Coombs-Gault combination is composed of former big-league specialists. Thomas, dean of A's scouts, is a former great catcher who formed the famous battery with Coombs, who hurled for the Mackmen during the 1910-1914 championship era. Coombs also coaches at Duke University, while Gault is a coach at the University of Pennsylvania.

"All youngsters 16 years old or over are invited to attend daily sessions from 9:30 to 3:30, to be conducted by the famous A's scouts. It's never too late to learn to play ball correctly — and if you show ability for playing, our scouts will sign you for the A's farm system."

Suggests Council Enact Needed Curfew Law Here

He says that the other evening he was returning home from the movies at 11:30 when he found two boys about 13 years of age loitering in front of the water works. "They should have been home. What is the matter with the parents these days?" he asks.

"I think that the police should question these young people when they are seen at a late hour, and tell them to go home. Perhaps their names and addresses should be taken," he suggests.

Along The Sports Trail

By John Gollightly
(I. N. S. Sports Writer)

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 9—(INS)—Roy Hamer, general manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates, says he has learned his lesson and never again will let cagey Branch Rickey of the Brooklyn Dodgers talk him into another deal.

Hamer figures the lesson cost him $600,000. The Pirate mastermind has been easily the Brooklyn mahatma's most pliable victim in the baseball trading market. But he has developed caution since Pittsburgh developed a group of never-beens, most of whom now are receiving their mail in the minors.

It all began right after the new Pirate owners took over the club in 1946. Rickey artfully dangled a Herring (first name Art) before Hamer, certifying that Pittsburgh's relief pitching problems would be solved.

Rickey netted $200,000 in the deal, but the Herring was a red one. Art established something of a record for a non-stop flight from bullpen to pitching mound to the showers and thence to the bushes.

Behrman Goes Back

Next Catcher Dixie Howell, infielder Gene Mauch and Pitchers Kirby Higbe, Hank Behrman and Cal McLish became Pirate property in exchange for $250,000 and outfielder Al Gionfriddo.

Behrman, who came on a "look-see" basis, was returned and Rickey had to give back $50,000. None of the other Pirate acquisitions helped a great deal with the exception of Higbe.

Gionfriddo, meanwhile, weighed in with an all-important circus catch for the Dodgers in the 1947 World Series, although he subsequently returned to the minors.

Then Rickey really began to pour it on. Infielder Eddie Basinski, an accomplished violinist, played the background music which caused Hamer to plunk down $35,000 for his services. Eddie gave the Bucs a lot of culture but didn't help the second base situation.

At Last, A Regular

Pitcher Steve Nagy was served up for $45,000. He did fairly well at Indianapolis.

Second Baseman Monty Baskall followed for a paltry $30,000. Then the adding machines began clicking again as Shortstop Stan Rojek and First Sacker Eddie Stevens became Pirate regulars for a reported $110,000.

But best of all from the mahatma's standpoint — was the trade which sent Fitcher Elwood (Preacher) Roe, infielders Billy Cox and Gene Mauch (remember him) and an estimated $100,000 to Brooklyn for Pitchers Hal Gregg and Vic Lombardi and Outfielder Dixie Walker.

Then came proof of Rickey's sales technique. When Rojek had a great year for the Pirates, B. R. sadly told newsmen he had really kicked that one — Rojek was the best shortstop in the league, and so forth.

Another Killing

All this sweet music primed Hamer for the next killing. The Pirate head forgot that Cox and Roe were going great guns for the Dodgers. Naively, he turned over $55,000, Outfielder Johnny Hopp and a few

"Battle for China": UNITY IS MAGIC WORD IN BATTLE RAVAGED CHINA

Is Also The Most Elusive
In Nationalist China

SEARCH NOT NEW

If Unity Can Be Achieved
Tide May Be Changed
Against Communists

The magic word in battle-torn China is "unity." It's also the most elusive. In the following article, second of a series of five on the momentous military and political struggle now searing the lives of 450,000,000 Chinese, veteran Foreign Eastern Correspondent Howard Handelman tells of the currents and counter-currents besetting all of China's leaders.

By Howard Handelman (Far Eastern Director, International News Service)

TAIPEH, Formosa, Aug. 9.—(INS)—Unity is the magic word in Nationalist China—and a long-sought objective.

If unity can be achieved by the Nationalists, they may be able to turn the tide against the advancing Communists.

Lack of unity was the fundamental problem facing Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek when, last month, he resumed leadership of the Nationalist fight against the Communists.

Nor is the search for unity anything new in China. It also was the goal Dr. Sun Yat Sen, founder of the republic, strove for throughout his life. Other Chinese revolutionaries, including the Communists, have been seeking it too for 40 years.

China, with its vast territory; its 450,000,000 to 500,000,000 peoples; its many languages, religions and races—and its traditional provincial hatreds, prejudices and rivalries—never has been a "nation" in the Western sense.

All Chinese read the same language, but around that common written language are scores of spoken dialects completely unintelligible to any but the people of the district in which they prevail.

A Shanghai Chinese, for instance, can no more converse with a Cantonese than a German can talk with an Italian.

Sun Yat-Sen and then Chiang Kai-Shek tried hard to lead a revolution which would convert China

Trenton Man Employed Here Reported Missing

Alfred Markey, 36, of Lincoln avenue, Trenton, N. J., is listed among persons missing from their Trenton homes.

Markey is listed as an iron worker in this borough. Police have been asked to conduct a search for him.

A SUMMARY OF THE NEWS

The Senate passed last night and sent to conference with the House the $5,647,724,000 appropriation bill to finance Marshall Plan allocations, occupation costs of the United States Army and continued assistance to Greece and Turkey for the current fiscal year. Sixty-three Senators, thirty-six Democrats and twenty-seven Republicans, supported the bill; six Republicans and one Democrat opposed it.

A proposal by Senator Vandenberg and other Republicans that the Administration accept an interim program of foreign military aid involving an initial expenditure below that of the requested $1,450,000,000 drew a sharp rejoinder from Secretary of State Acheson, who said there was "no point" in it. Mr. Acheson said this nation's "first line of defense is still in Europe" and the military weakness of Europe should be remedied as quickly as possible.

The Ministerial Committee of the Council of Europe recommended that Greece, Turkey and Iceland be admitted as members of the Council.

The military organization for the defense of the nations allied under the North Atlantic treaty may be formed "within a few months," Gen-

According to the picnic committee, the participants "ate them out of house and home." Something like 80 hams; 3,000 clams and another 3,000 ears of corn, and a ton of other miscellaneous items, including cheese, bologna and barrels and barrels of liquid refreshments were completely disposed of before the final gong sounded the end of the 1949 picnic.

"It was the most successful that we have ever staged," the committee spokesman said.

Political speeches were barred according to the GOP picnic rules, but no restrictions were placed on the amount of food you wanted to consume.

Congressman Franklin H. Lichtenwalter, of the Bucks-Lehigh district, made the trip from Washington especially to be on hand for the

SUGGESTS THAT COUNCIL ENACT CURFEW LAW TO PROTECT MORALS OF YOUNG FOLKS WHOSE MORALS ARE BEING DEGRADED

Bristol needs a curfew law. At least that is the opinion of John Raccagno, fifth ward councilman, who, last evening, asked council to give consideration to such a law to protect the youth of Bristol. Support was given to the suggestion by Francis J. Byers, and upon motion of I. J. Hetherington, the matter was referred to police committee and the ordinance committee for consideration.

Had Been Much Conjecture
Over What Huge
Fish Was

BETWEEN 12 AND 15 FT.

Is it a whale? Is it a shark?

That is the question which is agitating habitants of the Delaware river in this vicinity.

First it was reported that a whale had come up the Delaware river and was to be found in the channel between Burlington Island and the Burlington mainland. This brought a scare into bathers and boatmen alike.

Then some said that it was a shark. This report sent cold shivers up the spinal columns of river bathers, and many kept out of the river and sought other localities for bathing.

Now it is said that the stranger seen swimming in the Delaware is a porpoise.

Clarence W. Winter, well-known yachtsman, said today that which is attracting so much attention and which has even gotten notoriety in Philadelphia newspapers, is a porpoise.

MODERNIZATION OF SHELTER COMPLETED

Wire-Enclosed, Tree-Shaded
Runs Among The SPCA
Changes At Lahaska

DETAILED REPORT

LAHASKA, Aug. 9.—The shelter of Bucks County Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, located here, has been modernized. This announcement was made at the meeting of the executive committee Thursday evening.

Among the improvements are new wire-enclosed tree-shaded runs with concrete floors and ramp leading to metal-walled spick and span individual kennels, a spacious exercise corral, and box stall for horses and other livestock given temporary accommodations.

Visitors in search of a healthy, lovable pup, full-grown dog, kitten or cat are very likely to find among the shelter's "inmates" exactly the sort of four-footed pal they've set their hearts on. There must be proof, however, of a worthy home and kindly care plus agreement that if, for any reason, "adoption" is regretted, the animal will be returned to the society and not be transferred elsewhere without express permission.

A detailed report of activities presented for the committee's approval by Field Secretary Knicker-

No decision has been reached on selling pieces of the White House. Some say it's never been done before although political historians might disagree.

But millions of Americans would pay a dime or a dollar toward the restoration in exchange for a bit of molding, hunk of plaster or other souvenir.

They're going to pay it anyway in taxes, and think of the cheer a souvenir of the White House would bring into the drab life of a Republican family!

Just to be able to point to a framed bit of velvet over the fireplace and say "Coolidge looked out from behind that drape."

Mr. Hoover is one of the few living Americans who can remember that there ever was a Republican President.

And Democrats have been saying such nice things about him in advance of his birthday that they must have forgotten he was.

TRAFFIC VIOLATIONS PILE UP FOR ONE MAN

Philadelphian Fined $71.75
Plus Costs For Ignoring Summonses

IS ARRESTED HERE

It cost a Philadelphia man $71.75 in fines for ignoring police orders for traffic violations in Bristol and in lower Bucks County. Added to this were costs of the case.

Joseph J. Gonforone, 2913 Dighton street, Philadelphia, was stopped in Bristol by Police Officer John Sackville, on July 19th. On that occasion Gonforone was unable to produce an operator's license, and informed the officer that he had left it at home. He was given 48 hours in which to report at police headquarters here with the license. This he failed to do.

A few days later he was given a "ticket" for a parking violation on Mill street and when he did not report in the given time he was mailed a summons. To this he paid no attention.

Harrisburg—Auditor General Weldon B. Heyburn today reported payments totaling $45,549 to 19 State-aided institutions. The funds, representing quarterly payments of legislative appropriations, included: Bucks County—Quakertown Hospital Association, $1,825.

Sister Republics Aid Stricken Ecuador

QUITO—Ecuador's sister republics, led by the U. S., opened their hearts and purses today and poured aid into the quake-stricken country, where an estimated 4,000 to 7,000 persons are believed dead. U. S. planes from Panama continued a mercy airlift, pouring tons of blood plasma, serums and drugs into the country.

Hints Hold-Up of Action on Arms-Aid Bill

Washington—Sen. Knowland (R., Calif.), hinted today that he will attempt to hold up action on the Arms-Aid Bill until Gen. Douglas MacArthur is brought home to testify, but Defense Secretary Johnson called for immediate passage of the $1,450,000,000 program. Johnson told a Senate hearing that the Arms Bill is urgently necessary to "fill the military vacuum in Western Europe." The Defense Secretary testified after Knowland indicated he will use this ultimatum. Either Johnson orders MacArthur home to testify on Far Eastern phases on the arms proposal or Knowland will try to block Senate action on the legislation.

Communists have succeeded in gathering only an insignificant vote in Japan, but they are readying their well known technique to tie that country into knots. They have the aid now of returned war prisoners from Russia who were thoroughly impregnated with communism.

As the world learned during the war, the Japanese are capable of pushing warfare with fanatical cruelty. And if the communists ever get the upper hand, the populace will fall into line like sheep.
In this situation General Mac-Arthur stands as the dominant figure. He has already spoken more strongly against Russia than any other world figure, and if the bumbling bureaucrats in Washington do not countermand him, he'll hold a tight rein.

Asia is crumbling before a red drive and America must hold Japan, Okinawa, the Philippines and protect Australia, which can expect little if any aid from the decrepit socialist government in London. The alternative is that Russia will cut across this country's lifelines in the Pacific.

Russia is plugging for a four-power conference to make peace with Japan. The four powers would be America, Russia, Red China and Britain. With that lineup, the Russians might easily win a foothold in Japan. But Washington has not been caught napping in this instance. It continues to contend all nations engaged in the war against the axis should make the peace, an agreement in which the West has a majority.

It has already been demonstrated that Russia respects a firm position. MacArthur is the man who can present it to them. If Washington backs him up, he'll tell the Moscow gang in language that is effective if not diplomatic.

MEXICAN CANAL

Mexico has a scheme to dig a sea level canal across the narrow part of that country, a distance of 140 miles. The stream bed of the Coatzacoalcas River could be used for 90 miles. There would be no locks.

Bombing damage in war could be repaired in a few days, whereas bombs could knock out the Panama Canal for months. It would save 2,000 miles of sailing between New York and West Coast ports. Construction cost is estimated at $3,500,000,000.

It might be concluded that if such a canal is dug, the United States will be sitting on a nearly worthless investment in Panama. That isn't the case, however. This country is expected to put up the money and provide the engineers for the job.

Senator Dennis Chavez of New Mexico long has been an advocate of the Mexican Canal and has a bill pending in Congress to construct it as a defense measure.

If the United States provides the money and personnel for a canal through Mexico, presumably it would have a first mortgage on the property and have full rights along with Mexico.
But this might turn out to be wishful thinking.

LIFE GOES INTO HIGH GEAR FOR ONE OF 70

Actress of Some 70 Summers "Steals" Show
From Stars

PLAYS ROLE TO HILT

By Inez Robb
(Distributed by INS)

NEW YORK, Aug. 9—(INS)—
Life may begin at forty but it really starts rolling in high gear at around three score and ten.

The most flagrant bit of larceny on Broadway is committed eight times weekly by a woman of some seventy summers.

The larcenous lady is Miss Ethel Griffies, who will probably never see seventy again and who made her first stage appearance when she was two and a half. She not only swipes the new musical comedy
"Miss Liberty" right out from under its youthful feminine stars, Mary McCarthy and Allyn McLerie, but she has compounded the felony by becoming the current toast of Broadway.

Just exactly how old is Miss Griffies, who sings and capers through "Miss Liberty," nobody knows —
and the lady herself ain't talkin'.
It's not my vanity, my dear, it's just that my age is my own business," Miss Griffies said with a sly smile as we sat in the drawing room of the mid-town hotel apartment where she makes her home with her actor husband, Edward Cooper.

In "Miss Liberty," this English-born actress plays the most raffish, thoroughly disreputable old harridan that Broadway has seen in years. And plays it to the hilt.

No matter how dubious the critics may have been about other facets of the Robert Sherwood-Irving Berlin-Moss Hart musical, they agreed as one that she stole the show and is slightly wonderful.

How does it feel, I asked her, to be the Belle of Broadway at — well, at three score and ten.

"It's very nice," she said placidly.
"But at my age, there's no future in it."

Then she laughed the deep, rowdy laugh with which she fills the theatre nightly and added:
"At my age, you don't have much future left."

Before I went to call on Miss Griffies, I had never seen her except on the stage. I had no idea what she would be like, but I rather feared a bottle blonde, with a half-nelson on perennial youth and bleached curls.

I couldn't have been wrong, the shameless scene stealer of "Miss Liberty" has gray — almost white — hair, cut rather short and innocent of beauty-parlor kinks. The fact is: Miss Griffies looks her age, whatever that is. And is quite content to be it.

She was dressed in dowager
black, in a cut that would have done credit to Queen Mary, her slim feet elegantly encased in black suede pumps with handsome cut steel buckles.

The only links between Miss Griffies and the old harriidan she plays so triumphantly are a salty sense of humor, an ageless vigor and the deep, unexpected diaphragm (belly to you) laugh that wells from both.
"Miss Liberty" is the first musical she has adorned in 42 years in that interim; she has been a featured player on Anglo-American stages and in 160 Hollywood movies.

After seventeen years and 160
movies in Hollywood, Miss Griffies announced her retirement two years ago and resolutely shipped all the Griffies-Cooper goods and gear back to Liverpool.

Fortunately for Broadway, she and Mr. Cooper stopped in New York for a final look and she was immediately offered a role in John Van Druten's "The Druid Circle."
Since then, offers have showered down on her; and retirement grows dimmer and dimmer.

"If 'Miss Liberty' has a good run
— say two years — I might retire
then," she said. "But if it just runs a season, I think I'd like to do one more play."

The stage-door Johnny of her youth, "A man-about-town who had both money and leisure," has disappeared, Miss Griffies added.

"There is neither money nor leisure any more," she continued, "and the stage-door Johnny has been replaced by strange young persons who want my autograph, on untidy slips of paper, for no known reason."

I asked Mr. Cooper if his wife was really as modest as she seemed about her stunning success.

"Don't let her kid you," he advised indignantly in the most elegant English accent.

en wingless chicken eggs for hatching purposes have been flown by breeder Peter Bauman of Des Moines to England. The shipment,

lege, Newport, Shropshire.

Don't Talk of Others Near Child

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

WE have warned against our talking with other adults about the child, especially the young child, in his presence, as if he were a pet or toy. We also considered how we can harm him by bragging to our adult friends about his virtues and exploits or by complaining to them about his faults, while he is listening to us.

Today we shall consider the moral harm to him from hearing us talk of the faults of other folks. In our conversation with guests it is easy for us to drift into the habit of saying things about other persons known by us and by the guests, even to repeat unkind things we have heard about these other persons. Usually our guests are as ready to engage in such talk—to gossip—as we are and they and we egg each other along.

There's just something meaningful in all of us to say unkind things at times of other persons behind their backs. We don't do so on purpose to harm them. We just do it for about the same reason that a dog wags its tail. When we talk as we feel without keeping in mind the possible effect our talk may have on us, the absent person talked about and our listening children, we don't guard our thoughts and speech any more than the cows grazing in the meadow guard their steps. Now the cows are brutes.
How much higher are we than the brutes when we gossip?

What makes us talk to gossip?
Human Nature. In the first place it takes less of our intelligence to see faults of others than to see their virtues, and we all are pretty lazy.
It makes us feel pretty important ourselves to dwell on others' ills and shortcomings. The implication is, "Now look at me." Speaking ill of others in secret adds some lure since we feel it's a bit naughty.

More Eyebrows Now the Style

Courtesy 20th Century Fox

Pretty eyebrows are a valuable beauty asset and should be treated as such, says Movie Star Jean Peters. Pluck them, but not too much, she adds.

By HELEN FOLLETT

NO beauty frenzy has done so much to change the expression of the feminine map as the attenuated eyebrow. What you do to these little forehead scimitars has much to do with the way you look, charming or otherwise.

A change has come, a sort of swing back, as happens to all pulchritude whimsies. Eyebrows have been long and narrow. They are still long—sometimes extended by means of the crayon—but they are definitely more robust, more like the natural design. It won't do to tweeze them to a definitely straight line, a practice of some of our amateur eyebrow weathers. They should have a graceful curve because the lines of the face are curved—the lips, the wings of the nose, the eyes and the chin.

Along Border Line

It became pretty much of a custom to tweeze along the under border line, upping the position of the eyebrow. All right if it suits facial proportions and features, but not good when the forehead is low.

The inner end of the eyebrow should extend slightly beyond the inner termination of the eyelashes.
Archings must conform to the shape of the eye. If the eyes are long and narrow, the far end of the eyebrow should drop gracefully to a fine point.

It is interesting to know that long ago, time when your great-grandmother was young, skimpy eyebrows were considered a goodlooks liability. It seems that the ladies of that period applied hair tonic to theirs so they would be lustrous.

So, one wonders, what is beauty, anyhow? Ideals change with the times. Mr. Webster defines beauty as "that quality or combination of qualities which gratifies the eye or the ear, or which delights the intellectual or moral sense by its grace or fitness to the end in view."
Present fashions always seem to delight the eye of woman. And that's just dandy.

QUALITY AT MODERATE COST

A COMBINATION OF HORIZONTAL and vertical siding gives this modern ranch house a particularly interesting exterior. Adding to the charm of its outside appearance is the picture window in the living room at right, and the built-in flower box under the front bedroom window, at left.

THE HOUSE CAN BE BUILT either with or without a basement. When designed with basement, as above, a breezeway connects house and garage.

IF THE BASEMENT IS OMITTED, the space between the kitchen and the garage is devoted to a utility room where the heater and the tubs are located.

By MARION CLYDE McCARROLL

A VAST amount of interest has grown up today around the so-called modern ranch house.

The trim smartness of the appearance of this type of home, and the very efficient interior plan that is characteristic of it, have combined to win it a wide degree of popular approval.

The two attractive houses pictured here, both coming under the ranch house designation, attractively combine quality construction with moderate cost. Both dwellings are shown with two plans, one with, the other without a basement. Each has an attached garage.

The one at the top of the page has a good-sized living room with fireplace and picture window, two bedrooms and bath, kitchen with dining space, and ample closet room.

The house at the right, slightly smaller than the first, is also a two bedroom home, with living room and kitchen with dining area. Corner windows in living room—which also has an attractive fireplace—provide a luxurious amount of light and air.

In each case, where the house is built without the basement, a utility room is located between the house itself and the garage.

Blueprints for constructing either of these houses, whether with or without the basement, can be obtained at reasonable cost through your local lumber dealer, who can order them for you from National Plan Service, Inc., 1315 W. Congress Street, Chicago 7, Ill. Identify by name or number as shown in corner of picture.

Available also, and without charge, are separate booklets picturing these two houses with their floor plans, and also containing pertinent building information. The booklets can be had by writing to the West Coast Lumbermen's Association, 1410 S.W. Morrison Street, Portland 5, Oregon.

backer Davis, for the period of June 1st to July 31st indicated that the society is competently discharging its functions in behalf of animals throughout the county.

Scores of complaints involving cruelty were promptly investigated and effectively dealt with. Livestock and poultry sales were regularly inspected with resulting correction of improper handling and overcrowding. A sharp watch was kept for unnecessary suffering of animals during transportation, particular emphasis was given to curbing hit-run motorists failing to stop and render assistance after injuring dogs, cats and other animals.

During the two months covered by the field secretary's report the society's ambulance service made collections of dogs and cats reaching a total of 1145. Fifty-three dogs and 7 cats were placed in homes. Six burials were made in the shelter's pet cemetery.

Arrest, prosecution and conviction of two violators of sections of the penal code protecting animals against cruelty were also reported. One of the offenders a hit-run driver, who failed to stop after fatally injuring a dog. The other the owner of a dog which had been permitted to suffer prolonged torture from a collar so tightly strapped that it had become partially imbedded in maggot-infested and putrescent sores. Examination after the hopelessly suffering animal had been mercifully destroyed further disclosed a rubber band encircling neck and throat which had penetrated almost to the windpipe.

It was reported that surveys being made throughout the county indicate widespread and growing approval of the society's prompt, impartial and efficient methods of dealing with animal abuses, and an increasing desire on the part of humanitarians to further the society's efforts.

Plans were discussed by the executive committee for securing a long needed representative whose time could be devoted solely to investigational work and contacts with the public now necessarily curtailed because of limited field personnel.

The last week of camp opened on Sunday with 93 campers in attendance. Camp Ockanickon will close its most successful year in its history with appropriate ceremony Sunday at 1:00 p. m.

Winter says that the porpoise measures "between 12 and 15 feet." "I have seen him and played with him. Last Friday I played with him for more than an hour and followed him from Pennsbury to Fieldsboro and then again in the area of Bordentown.

"I followed him up the river in the center of the channel. He is not afraid of my boat and I would run alongside of him and he would bob up and down and in and out of the water. He would come up about every minute or every minute and a half. If I went close to him he disappeared beneath the water and stayed there."

Winter saw the porpoise again last night in the river off the Kaiser-Fleetwings plant here, and had a lot of fun with him. Friday night, when Winter first saw him, the Bristol yachtsman went to Bordentown and told some of the members of the yacht club there, and they scoffed at the idea. "All right, come with me," was the invitation extended, and when shown they believed.

It is the opinion of John L. Killoyne, Esq., that the porpoise has followed some school of fish up the river recently and is staying here.

ANOTHER HOUSE OF THE RANCH TYPE is this compact little hip-roofed dwelling. Exterior construction is also of siding. Note pleasant corner windows, one of them in the living room, right, the other in dining area.

picnic. Speaking over the "micro" briefly, at the request of State Senator Edward B. Watson, Congressman Lichtenwalter assured his many friends that he was "practicing up" for that solo he is scheduled to sing at the October 10th meeting of the Loyal Republican Club of Bucks County, when "Lichtenwalter and Candidates' Night" will be celebrated.

All the county candidates were on hand for the picnic, including Willard S. Curtin, Morrisville, for District Attorney; Harry R. Ross, Churchville, for Sheriff; Joseph A. Keating, Pennel, for Prothonotary; County Controller Howard G. Krupp, Chalfont, seeking another term; J. Hart Jamison, Ivyland, for Recorder of Deeds; J. Robert Hendricks, of Bristol, for Jury Commissioner.

President Judge Hiram H. Keller, candidate for another term; and District Attorney Edward G. Blesler, who has been unanimously endorsed by the executive committee of the Republican County Committee for the appointment to the office of additional law judge, were also among the picnickers.

Many new members were signed up during the picnic to increase the rapidly growing membership of the club, that is now probably the most active of its kind in the entire State.

Put Stunt, Sport Type Control Models in Air

Hundreds of interested spectators were attracted to the model air show held by the Aeromodelers Sunday afternoon at Wilson Field. Dozens of stunt and sport type control line models were in the air all afternoon. Model "dog fights" were staged by visiting members of the Glenside Air Scouts.

Late in the afternoon a thrilling team race was held. Ralph Biddle, a member of the Doylestown Model Club, won this event with an average speed for the five mile race of 58 miles per hour. This included stops for refueling and repairs.

No contest speed or stunt models were flown because members of the club are saving them for the Lancaster model meet next Sunday. This is expected to be the last Sunday model air show or flying session until winter because the Sunday contest schedule is booked solid until November 1st.

"Movies" of some 1949 air races will be shown to Aeromodelers at the meeting on Wednesday evening. A business meeting will be held at several items of importance need to be voted upon.

The committee has arranged a special menu, and a special program.

Pneumatic Hammer Hits Worker, Causes Blast

BUCKINGHAM, Aug. 9.—Struck by a pneumatic hammer he was using which detonated a stick of dynamite, John Molis, 33, of Rushland, was injured. The quarry is operated by the Bituminous Service Co., of Chester.

The blast threw Molis into a pile of crushed stone, bits of which became embedded in the upper part of his body. A fellow-worker, Joseph Solana, 26, of Warrington, Molis' brother-in-law, was nearby. He suffered minor head cuts from flying stones. Ignoring his injuries, Solana put Molis in his automobile and drove him to Doylestown Emergency Hospital. After treatment, Molis was transferred to Abington Memorial Hospital, where doctors said his condition was good.

WEST PLAINS, Mo.—(INS)—A certain Missouri squirrel knows its rights. Paul Evans of West Plains a sign reading: "No Hunting." noticed while driving near his home sitting on top of the sign was a squirrel, nibbling happily on a nut.

CATS LOSE OUT

SAN DIEGO, Cal.—(INS)—Four cats lost a $2,000 bequest provided in the will of the late William Ashton Bowker. A court ruled it as doubtful if the cats currently at the Bowker home were the same ones owned by Bowker when he was alive.

Unity Is Magic Word In Battle-Ravaged China

into a nation. Chiang, achieved a national political administration for a time, but even in the period of greatest unity there still were whole provinces which refused to pay taxes to the central government.

Today in Canton, the central government is an unwelcome guest, playing second fiddle to the provincial and even the municipal government. The nominally subsidiary governments are keeping the best office space, retain top telephone priorities and monopolize all the best physical facilities of the city.

The Nationalist Government has taken what was left, and as a result is scattered all over the sprawling city. In one instance the Foreign Office was forced to ask a foreign embassy where it could find the Naval Ministry.

Chiang and his armies defeated the warlords 20 years ago, but the spirit of provincial independence from the central government remains and is a major weakness of Nationalist China.

Chiang still talks about the revolution to make a nation of China. But now, faced with the emergency of powerful Communist aggression, Chiang and his people are striving hard for a limited amount of unity, just enough to enable him to run a more effective war.

That means unity at the top, among politicians and generals.

Old wounds and old rivalries from political strife of 20 years ago sometimes stand in the way of that unity. It still is not clear whether the generalissimo has patched up his differences with acting President Li Tsung-jen. Foreign observers tend to doubt the long-standing break has been fixed.

Members of the generalissimo's personal staff swear that an agreement was reached in the Canton conferences and declare that future events will bear them out.

The generalissimo's men say that Chiang's declaration of personal and party support of Li's government, and Li's statement supporting the agreement, the generalissimo (made in the Philippines) indicate that the two men now are working together.

The best test of whether there is unity probably will be made through the actions of General Pai Chung-hsi, the Moslem commander in Kiangsi and Hunan.

Pai is a close friend and ally of Li. Pai and Li together were kicked out of the Kuomintang in 1930 and kept out for almost two years. Again in 1936 they were in trouble with the generalissimo, protesting what they believed to be his "appeasement" policy towards the Japanese.

Li no longer has his own troops, so he must depend upon friends like Pai for his support. Pai is important support, too. His troops are reputedly the best in south China. Whether or not they are, it is a fact that they are the only numerically strong troops between the Communists and Canton.

American military observers like Pai. They consider him a competent soldier with a good army that is personally loyal to him. But they doubt whether he will use that army to stop the Red drive on Canton. One American explained:

"In China a general without troops is nothing. There is no national pool of troops to keep divisions and armies up to strength, nor any effective supply service to keep armies equipped. Therefore a general gets his own recruits, takes steps to feed, pay and equip them, and thereby wins their personal loyalty."

"The National Government controls the stockpiles of equipment, most of which are on Formosa where, in effect, the generalissimo controls the armaments."

"Pai would fight if he could be certain his battle losses in equipment would be replaced. He does not want men from other armies. He prefers men he recruits himself, in his own province, so he can be certain of their loyalty to him."

These old attitudes, mistrusts and prejudices are the things

Chiang must overcome if he is to whip his government and armies into fighting trim.

(Tomorrow — There also are cracks in the Chinese Communist armor.)

received an award in recognition of having traveled the greatest distance.

Mahlon Housekeeper, 88, received a gift for being the oldest person in attendance, and the prize for the youngest person present went to Kathryn Fluck, four months.

A Doylestown boy has been chosen as one of the participants to receive an award of $50, given to 13 wealthy boys and girls in the Philadelphia area under the terms of a trust established by a Philadelphia woman, who died 25 years ago.

Robert Highton, son of Herbert Highton, representing the Taber Home for Children, was chosen as one of the winners by a committee of officers of the Girard Trust Co. The charitable trust was made specifically for good moral character and habits, by Miss Julia Arner, who created the trust, having been opposed to prizes for scholarship.

Robert, who graduated recently from Doylestown high school, was a popular student there, having been a member of the student council, a class officer, a member of the News staff and Torch editorial staff, played football, basketball and was on the track team in addition to winning several other prizes. Next term he expects to attend Pennsylvania State College where he will major in journalism.

John H. Wisner, chairman of fire committee, informed council that the equipment of the fire department was in good condition and ready for service.

It was reported by Louis C. Spring, that Paul D. Brown has been engaged as playground supervisor and that a letter was in the hands of the secretary of council regarding improving the lighting of the parking lot. This letter was read and was to the effect that while the Recreation Board agreed that the lighting could be improved that the amount of money allocated to the board by council would not permit the board to obligate itself to the expenditure of $529 additional. The Board wrote that if that amount of money was available that it would prefer using it to clean-up and grade that portion of the parking area which had not been improved. The letter was ordered received and filed. The lighting project had been referred to the Board from the street committee at the last meeting of council.

The report of Chief of Police, Linford J. Jones, who attended the annual convention of the chiefs of police association in Pittsburgh was referred without reading to the police committee.

A deficiency appropriation was authorized to cover the expense of laying water and sewer mains on Second avenue and on Prospect street before these streets are improved.

The Board of Health advised council that James A. Callahan had resigned as a member of the board. Secretary of council was instructed to write Mr. Callahan that he should tender his resignation to council.

Council president, Charles G. Rathke, said that he had received complaints about the condition of the baseball diamonds and the field in Memorial Park. He said that out-of-town players complained of the condition of the field. L. C. Spring, president of the Recreation Board, which has charge of the park, said that a lack of money appropriated by council was a handicap in doing some of the things which are necessary. He offered to contribute his $25 monthly salary as a councilman to the use of the Board, if other members of council would do likewise. Councilman Wisner said that he saw the grass being cut on the ball field yesterday and that the diamonds are in good shape.

Dennis J. Roche, chairman of water committee, told council that the water tank and riser at Pond and Mulberry street, is in bad condition and is in need of immediate repairs. The repairs were authorized. The tank was built in 1912 and the usual life of a such a tank, he said, is 20 years.

Council voted to purchase an air compressor for $275.35 and a deficiency appropriation was authorized.

It was voted that borough equipment is not to be loaned to individuals.

Borough solicitor was instructed to release S. J. Groves and Sons from an agreement entered into at the time that the use of the sand hole on borough property was authorized.

John Smoyer, sixth ward councilman, asked that the secretary be instructed to file a preliminary statement of interest with the state, so that if later there is such interest in applying for financial aid in improving and redeveloping the housing situation here, that the borough would have a priority.

The sum of $1,373.520 has been allocated for Bucks, Chester, Montgomery and Delaware counties.

It was called to the attention of council by Francis J. Byers that today (Monday) one of Bristol's leading citizens had been buried. "Mr. Thomas Scott was a former burgess and a former member of council," said Mr. Byers, and, "I move you that a committee be named to write an appropriate resolution, a copy of which is to be spread upon the minutes of council, a copy mailed to the family and a copy published in the local newspaper." President Rathke named Mr. Byers, I. J. Hetherington and Clarence W. Winter as the committee, all being residents of the first ward, in which Mr. Scott had resided.

An invitation was received from

Lodge No. 53, Fraternal Order of Police, to the annual picnic of the organization which is to be held Sunday, August 14th, at the grounds of Kilian Country Club, Eddington.

A letter was reported being received from the State Department of Welfare complimenting the borough upon the excellent condition of the borough look-up.

It was announced that council will hold a public hearing upon the zoning ordinance on August 30 in the municipal building at 8 p. m.

John Raccagnio, fifth ward councilman, asked that the adopting of a curfew ordinance in Bristol be investigated. It was referred to police and ordinance committees.

KROEHLER SLASHES PRICES

One of the biggest news items in the furniture world this year is the nation-wide furniture sale Kroehler has scheduled for this August. "Its effect on local prices will be felt here," according to Mr. Spencer, of Spencers, Inc.

The sale is unusual in that the Kroehler Mfg. Co., reputedly the nation's largest makers of fine furniture, got together with all of their dealers many months ago and planned this promotion just for the month of August. With everybody working as a team, the values offered are exceptional.

The biggest special and "budget-cutter" promises to be the one to be pictured in the Kroehler August sale "ad" which will appear in LIFE, SATURDAY EVENING POST, LADIES' HOME JOURNAL and BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS. It's a sofa and chair combination and buyers are calling it really special. In a choice of three fabrics with many colors in each one, both pieces are backed by the Company's 56 years of reputation for quality.

Specifically, there's the famous "hidden-cavity" construction, Mr. Spencer points out, which means long-lasting, good-looking comfort, plus styling by top-notch designers. This "special" has the good, clean lines that make modern so popular, with a hint of traditional in the two-cushion sofa detail. Sounds like a value worth a careful look — (Advertisement.)

JEFFERIES HITS TWO HOME RUNS AND FIREMEN WIN

Earl Jefferies hit two home runs last evening on Memorial Park field as Fire Company No. 1 beat the Fleetswing Estates team, 11-5. By virtue of its win, the firemen maintained its chances of getting into the playoffs of the Bristol Suburban Softball League.

Jefferies first circuit clout came in the third inning with Allen Hibbs and Alex Dixon on base. The second four-base ply came in the fifth frame with Dixon again on base. The firemen's centerfield also had a single to his credit to give him a perfect evening with the stick.

"Eddie" Kornichuck was the winning hurler and with the lead built by his mates early in the game had things his own way. He blanked the Estates' team for the first five stanzas. He was nicked for a run in the sixth and four more in the seventh. Kornichuck gave up four passes in these two innings.

Tony Zanni was the losing moundman. He pitched until Jefferies got his first homer. Then "Mike" Graveur took up the pitching burden and he finished, allowing four runs and five hits.

Of the five Estates' hits, two went to Frankie Balazs and another pair to Chambers.

Fire Company No. 1, is two games behind the fifth place Fifth Ward team.

ATHLETICS TO HOLD BASEBALL SCHOOL HERE FOR 3 DAYS

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 9—Arthur H. Ehlers, director of the Philadelphia Athletics' farm system, announced today that the A's will conduct the famous Connie Mack baseball school in Bristol.

Ehlers said the school will appear on Bristol's Sullivan's Field on August 22-23-24 with the hopes of finding real baseball talent while providing instructions in the fundamentals of the national pastime. Ehlers said that the school will be under the supervision of scouts Ira Thomas, Jack Coombs and Charley Gault.

The baseball sessions are being brought to Bristol through the efforts of William H. Elmer, of 592 Swain street.

In operation since 1942, the Thomas-Coombs-Gault combination is composed of former big-league specialists. Thomas, dean of A's scouts, is a former great catcher who formed the famous battery with Coombs, who hurled for the Mackmen during the 1919-1914 championship era. Coombs also coaches at Duke University, while Gault is a coach at the University of Pennsylvania.

"All youngsters 16 years old or over are invited to attend daily sessions from 9:30 to 3:30, to be conducted by the famous A's scouts. It's never too late to learn to play ball correctly — and if you show ability for playing, our scouts will sign you for the A's farm system."

He says that the other evening he was returning home from the movies at 11:30 when he found two boys about 13 years of age loitering in front of the water works. "They should have been home. What is the matter with the parents these days?" he asks. "I think that the police should question these young people when they are seen at a late hour, and tell them to go home. Perhaps their names and addresses should be taken," he suggests.

Along The Sports Trail

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 9—(INS)—Roy Hamery, general manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates, says he has learned his lesson and never again will let cagey Branch Rickey of the Brooklyn Dodgers talk him into another deal.

Hamery figures the lesson cost him $600,000. The Pirate mastermind has been easily the Brooklyn mahatma's most pliable victim in the baseball trading market. But he has developed caution since Pittsburgh developed a group of never-beens, most of whom now are receiving their mail in the minors.

It all began right after the new Pirate owners took over the club in 1946. Rickey artfully dangled a Herring (first name Art) before Hamery, certifying that Pittsburgh's relief pitching problems would be solved.

Rickey netted $20,000 in the deal, but the Herring was a red one. Art established something of a record for a non-stop flight from bullpen to pitching mound to the showers — and thence to the bushes.

Behrman Goes Back

Next Catcher Dixie Howell, infielder Gene Mauch and Pitchers Kirby Higbe, Hank Behrman and Cal McLish became Pirate property in exchange for $250,000 and Outfielder Al Gionfriddo.

Behrman, who came on a "look-see" basis, was returned and Rickey had to give back $50,000. None of the other Pirate acquisitions helped a great deal with the exception of Higbe.

Gionfriddo, meanwhile, weighed in with an all-important circus catch for the Dodgers in the 1947 World Series, although he subsequently returned to the minors.

Then Rickey really began to pour it on. Infielder Eddie Basinski, an accomplished violinist, played the background music which caused Hamery to plunk down $35,000 for his services. Eddie gave the Bucs a lot of culture but didn't help the second base situation.

At Last, A Regular

Pitcher Steve Nagy was served up for $15,000. He did fairly well at Indianapolis. Second Baseman Monty Basgall followed for a paltry $20,000. Then the adding machines began clicking again as Shortstop Stan Rojek and First Sacker Eddie Stevens became Pirate regulars for a reported $110,000.

But best of all from the mahatma's standpoint — was the trade which sent Fitcher Elwood (Preacher) Roe, Infielders Billy Cox and Gene Mauch (remember him) and an estimated $100,000 to Brooklyn for Pitchers Hal Gregg and Vic Lombardi and Outfielder Dixie Walker.

Then came proof of Rickey's sales technique. When Rojek had a great year for the Pirates, B. R. sadly told newsmen he had really kicked that one — Rojek was the best shortstop in the league, and so forth.

Another Killing
All this sweet music primed Hamery for the next killing. The Pirate head forgot that Cox and Roe were going great guns for the Dodgers. Naively, he turned over $35,000, Outfielder Johnny Hopp and a few minor leaguers for Outfielder Marv Rackley.

Rackley reported with a sore arm, and after a bit of headline bickering the deal was called off. That was the smartest thing Hamery accomplished in all his dealings with Rickey.

Maybe, despite his $600,000 outlay, Hamery is more to be pitied than censured.

Bing Crosby, part owner of the Bucs, tells how Rickey feigned surprise and put on his best "I am wounded by your insinuations" looks when the Groaner reproached him after listening to a trade talk. Said Bing:

"I'm going to hire a three-piece ensemble to play soft music while you put on this sales talk — you're a wonder."
